University of Illinois
MILITARY DAY, MAY 22, 1943
Message From the President

In 1862, Federal legislation provided grants for the establishment of Land-Grant colleges. In 1867, the State of Illinois, in accepting these Federal grants and in establishing the University of Illinois provided by law that military training would be required of all male students. Accordingly, the University of Illinois, in response to its obligations as a Land-Grant college, has required military training of its male students since it opened in 1868.

The people of the State and of the Nation should be grateful for the far-sighted vision of those who were responsible for such legislation which has supplied the United States Army with many officers who have been trained at the University of Illinois and other Land-Grant institutions.

During World War I men trained at the University of Illinois served in the Army and Navy with great distinction. In the present war additional officers and men trained at the University of Illinois are writing another brilliant chapter in the gallant history of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Through the years the University of Illinois Reserve Officers' Training Corps has become one of the largest and one of the best units of its kind in the country. This growth in size and distinction could not have taken place without splendid services of the officers on the instructional and administrative staff of the Military Department. We have been most fortunate in this respect, especially during the last two years, when it has been the privilege for most of these students to serve under the very able leadership of Colonel Leonard C. Sparks.

The men here today—particularly those in the advanced course—are to be highly commended for their fine efforts in preparing themselves for service to their country. This will probably be the last group to receive training through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps for the duration of the war. Some of the men were called to active service in February and a few were called last August. The University is justifiably proud of these men and of those who will soon be called. We are confident that their service will bring credit to themselves, to the State, and to the Nation.

A. C. Willard,
President.
Greetings from the Commandant to the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Illinois:

Upon completion of the current school year twenty-four years of the Advanced Course of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Illinois will be brought to a temporary close. For the remainder of this war the basic phase only of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps instruction will be continued. The advanced phase will be superseded by the Army Specialized Training Program.

With the departure of the present group of 690 cadets in the Advanced Course the University will have provided, through its Reserve Officers' Training Corps, 846 potential officer candidates for the Army and Marine Corps since the inauguration of its accelerated war program last summer.

During the twenty-four years of its existence the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Illinois has trained over forty-eight hundred cadets for reserve commissions in our national defense forces. The vast majority of these men are now rendering valuable service in those forces all over the world.

The traditions of integrity, loyalty and devotion to duty, which have become an integral part of the Corps of Cadets at the University of Illinois, will be enhanced through the service of its members in this war. When again we return to our normal peace-time procedure, we shall find the University, with an enriched heritage, carrying on the training of her sons for positions of responsible leadership in the service of our country.

THE CORPS OF CADETS

Military training has been given at the University of Illinois ever since the University was opened in 1868, under the charter issued by the State of Illinois, in compliance with the Federal law which provided for the establishment of land-grant colleges. Since the first World War this training has been given under the provisions of the Acts of Congress of 1916 and 1920, commonly known as the National Defense Acts. Under these laws, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Illinois was organized to provide the required basic training and to offer advanced voluntary training on a selective plan.

Six of the combat arms are represented in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, namely: Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery (AA), Engineers, and Signal Corps.

Military training at the University of Illinois is conducted with a view to fitting young men to better meet the problems encountered in civil life as well as to prepare them to serve their country in its military forces in time of war.

MILITARY COUNCIL

The Military Council has occupied an increasingly important position in student activities since its founding in 1929. Acting as a governing body of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, it strengthens the bond between the cadets of the R. O. T. C. and the officers of the regular staff.

The Military Council is responsible for the proper execution of all orders issued by the Military Department. Thus the Council endeavors to maintain the efficiency of the Corps of Cadets.

Among other activities, the Military Council has direct supervision of the Military Ball, which was held on November 20, 1942, and the Officers' Ball, which had to be cancelled this year due to wartime conditions. The Council also has charge of the editing and publishing of the Millini, the official publication of the Corps of Cadets. All profits derived from activities supported or sponsored by the Council are donated to the Military Special Units Fund. From this fund, expenditures for improvements, not provided for in the regular grants of the Federal or State governments, are met.

Membership of the Military Council is honorary. Members are identified by the white fourragere worn on the left shoulder.

The faculty advisers for the Military Council are designated by the Professor of Military Science and Tactics, Colonel Sparks. This year's advisers are Lt. Col. Robert K. Whitson, Inf., and First Lt. Edward J. Smith, Cav.

REVIEW NOTES

By DAVID KRAEHENBUEHL, Cadet Lt.-Col., S. C.

Men in uniform will not need to read this, but perhaps it will help those who have friends or relatives in the review to better understand the formal proceedings of a military review and to find familiar faces in the passing troops.

At first adjutant’s call, played by the bugles, the troops will march onto line and at second adjutant’s call the adjutant will move to the center of the field. The band will then troop the line, after which the adjutant will call the brigade to present arms while the National Anthem is played and the brigade is presented to Cadet Colonel Fisher. At his command the adjutant will receive the reports of the Cadet Lieutenant-Colonels and publish the orders. Following this the officers of the units participating in the review will be called to the center for instructions from the Cadet Colonel, and, when they have returned to their posts Cadet Colonel Fisher will present the troops to the reviewing officer, the President of the University, and his party.

At the command pass in review the Cadet Colonel and his staff will take a position in front of the band and will march past the reviewing stand followed by seven unit regiments, each preceded by a Cadet Lieutenant-Colonel and his staff. Each regiment will consist of two or three massed battalions led by Cadet Majors, the officer next in rank to the Cadet Lieutenant-Colonels. The units can be distinguished by the insignia and colors of their guidons, which will immediately precede each battalion: Infantry, blue with crossed rifles; Engineers, red with castle; Coast Artillery, red with a projectile superimposed on crossed cannon; Signal Corps, orange with crossed flags; Cavalry, red and white; Field Artillery, red with crossed field pieces. There will be two regiments of Field Artillery, one horse-drawn and one motor-drawn.

The colors play an important part in a review and will be on line directly in front of the reviewing stand. As the troops pass in review the colors will occupy the center position in the column and will be preceded and followed by members of the Pershing Rifles Battalion acting as color guard. The guidon of Pershing Rifles is white with a torch superimposed on crossed rifles.
