

Started from the Bottom Now I'm Here: How My Writing Has Improved

Hello! and welcome to the showcase section of my blog. Here you will find a variety of works which display how my writing has progressed throughout this semester. Throughout my Rhetoric 105 course, as you will soon find out, I was prompted to write about several different topics ranging from racism to ancient artifacts. Through these prompts, I have learned many writing techniques such as the use of Toulmin Analysis along with improved competency in revising and editing papers. The following posts in this menu consist of four original works which I have chosen specifically because I believe they do well in showcasing my writing progress. In addition, I have also included revised versions of each work along with a reflection paragraph explaining how I revised each work to further show my writing progress.

I invite you to look through each entry and observe how my writing techniques and skills have improved throughout the Fall 2015 semester. Thank you and enjoy!