

Block Quote Examples

Source text:

It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife.

However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighborhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered as the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters.

From Pride and Prejudice by Jane Austen

APA:

Jane Austen (1853) begins Pride and Prejudice like this:

It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife.

However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighborhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered as the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters. (p. 1)

Austen sets the tone of the rest of her novel, which satirizes the then-current societal views of marriage, with this sarcastic introduction.
