In 2016-2017, LER students came from 83 undergraduate institutions (40 domestic, 43 international), 55 majors, 16 states, and seven countries. The class was 70% female, 24% minority (15% African American, Latino/a, and Native American; 9% Asian American), and 37.8% International. Thirty-nine percent of the students had a year or more of work experience and the average age at entrance was 24.

Internships provide real-world experience to supplement classroom learning and allow employers to develop mentor relationships with current students. Private sector intern salaries averaged $5,166 per month. This year, 46% of graduating domestic students accepted employment offers at the company where they interned. The average private sector annual salary for full time hires was $77,310 with an average signing bonus of $7,694.
