

Student's Full Name

Professor's Name

Class

Date

Specific and Descriptive Title

Working Thesis: Your working thesis is what you think about the topic, but it's a "working" thesis because it might change after you do your research.

Source #1: Here you will put your citation for your first source. Be sure to alphabetize it and put it in MLA format. You can use easybib or the library databases to make your citation. (Don't put source #1, just begin with whatever comes first—usually the author's last name.

Summary Paragraph: Here is your summary of your first source. You will tell us what this source is about. You will want to tell us what the thesis is of the first source, and maybe a little bit about how the author supports it. You will keep your own opinion out of the summary.

Analysis paragraph: Here you will tell us about the following for your source: Is it reliable? Is it current? Has it been peer reviewed (for scholarly journals only) or has it been used as a source for other papers? Is it scholarly or popular? Also put ethos here—what do we know about the author? Who is the author and why should we listen to them?

Source #2: Here you will put your citation for your first source. Be sure to alphabetize it and put it in MLA format. You can use easybib or the library databases to make your citation. (Don't put source #1, just begin with whatever comes first—usually the author's last name.

Summary Paragraph: Here is your summary of your first source. You will tell us what this source is about. You will want to tell us what the thesis is of the first source, and maybe a little bit about how the author supports it. You will keep your own opinion out of the summary.

Analysis paragraph: Here you will tell us about the following for your source: Is it reliable? Is it current? Has it been peer reviewed (for scholarly journals only) or has it been used as a source for other papers? Is it scholarly or popular? Also put ethos here—what do we know about the author? Who is the author and why should we listen to them?

Source #3: Here you will put your citation for your first source. Be sure to alphabetize it and put it in MLA format. You can use easybib or the library databases to make your citation. (Don't put source #1, just begin with whatever comes first—usually the author's last name.

Summary Paragraph: Here is your summary of your first source. You will tell us what this source is about. You will want to tell us what the thesis is of the first source, and maybe a little bit about how the author supports it. You will keep your own opinion out of the summary.

Analysis paragraph: Here you will tell us about the following for your source: Is it reliable? Is it current? Has it been peer reviewed (for scholarly journals only) or has it been used as a source for other papers? Is it scholarly or popular? Also put ethos here—what do we know about the author? Who is the author and why should we listen to them?