RED BISON ecological restoration

In the past, prairie fires have been called "The Red Bison" with their blazing stampedes of bison in the wake of their raging walls of flame, the scorched landscape spring back to life as the roots and seeds underground bounced back with vigor. These periodic infernos which kept our native prairie a stable biological community for thousands of years. Like the Red Bison of folklore, we also hope to be a positive agent of change in what is left of Illinois' natural landscapes.

Red Bison Collaborations

During Earth week 2020, we conducted a brush burn at the SPH with SECS (Students for Environmental Concerns)

On 4/26/21, we helped prep (from the ground up) with non-sustainable removal in the Orchard Downs Prairie

In Spring 2021, Red Bison helped plant native species at the Rain Garden in Urbana

On 6/21/21, Red Bison helped iSEE (Institute for Sustainability, Energy, & Environment) plant a pollinator garden in front of the National Soybean Research Center on campus.
