CR #1 Reflection

The first note that professor Hays made on the critical response was about my title. She commented that the title must reveal something about your essay. The title is a very important part of an essay. It can serve as a hint to the reader about the essay. Also, a title can serve as an attention grabber. I change the title from "The Art of Writing" to "The Love of Writing." In this Critical Response I analyzed how three authors wrote about the process of writing and what they love about it. These authors love the art of writing and everything that comes with it.

In addition to the title, I've changed many grammatical errors. Although I do not make an outstanding amount of errors, I realize that I can vastly improve my grammar. First, I must take my time in writing and reading over my papers. It's crucial to have well language in my papers. Professor Hayes post links to websites like Purdueowl.org that include many grammar lessons. Revising this critical response has encouraged me to visit the links professor Hays not only includes in her revision comments , but also the ones she post in the weekly assignments.
